A Mile in My Shoes-Trevor Hudson 2017-05-15
We can be quick to pray for people around the world in times of trauma, but has prayer become a way to avoid taking real action? Are we reluctant to be fully aware of the suffering around us? Trevor Hudson challenges us to see, hear, and respond to the needs of others, recognizing the living Christ in all things. Hudson designed an 8-day program—a pilgrimage—to help all Christians cultivate the depth of compassion Jesus demonstrated. Through this program, pilgrims learn to be present wherever they are and with whomever they meet. "We seldom become more compassionate without working at it," writes Hudson. "One practical way to cultivate compassion involves building the pilgrimage experience into our lives. ...The risen Christ meets us in the lives of those who suffer." Join Trevor Hudson in this exploration of how to love your neighbor as yourself and choose compassion as part of your daily life.

There is a lot of knowledge I need to share. We as a species are being seriously messed with from every angle possible. We are being lied to about who we are and where we come from, and it hurts to see us as a species accepting things as they are. We should wake up and stop getting used to being treated like this. The evil ones in this world are seriously plotting against us. It's only us who can change the course of history and our future. Our world is going through a lot of difficult challenges. It's up to us to make a difference and awaken humanity and inspire the masses so we can all make our world a better place. The people of our world need to wake up to the truth. It's all on us. We have back up. We all need to collaborate every race, every religion, everybody. Believe me, we are all in this together. There are people and other beings in our world that live underground. The truth is that there are evil networks that are manipulating our military and governments to fight and kill these higher-dimensional beings. These beings are the first intelligent life here on earth known as Terra. These beings are better known as angels. There are many different species in the angelic kingdom. Heaven is not a faraway place. It's a dimension that lives around us. The governments and military need to wake up and realise who the bad guys are. We are being manipulated to believe these beings are alien and that they shouldn't be here when the truth is that this is their home too and we are the newer less-evolved species. That's why it's their job to protect us. The evil ones are trying to wipe them out. These are the people who are threats to humanity. We have to try to stop them.

The Story Behind My Glory-Demarco J. Speight 2012-10
Many people grow up under trying circumstances. Poverty, violence, and low self-esteem can add seemingly insurmountable obstacles to achieving one's full, God-given potential. Some people turn to God, thinking all their problems will go away. The Story behind My Glory offers a candid, transparent portrayal of author Demarco J. Speight's struggles, trials, tribulations, and triumphs on his journey from sinner to saint. Raised by a single mother who struggled to make ends meet, Speight grew up depressed and introverted, with low self-esteem; he was teased unmercifully. All that changed when, as a young man in high school, he took a trip to a small church in the backwoods of Georgia a trip that would change his life forever. Speight shares intimate inner thoughts as he recalls major milestones in his life and traces his path to the ministry and service to God. Giving oneself to God does not mean a problem-free life; as Speight shows in The Story behind My Glory. God can give you the strength and courage to meet those difficulties head-on and emerge a better person through the Glory of God.

A Mile in My Shoes-Isha MESSAM 2008-12-15 A Mile In My Shoes is the testimony of a courageous and determined woman who has been faced with a lot of hurt and pain in her life. The beginning of the book shows the life and relationship she has with her biological mother who had an addiction to drugs and abused her mentally, physically, and emotionally. The book is also a testimony that no matter what one has gone through or is going through, with faith and determination, it can indeed be overcome. This story is told with the intention of helping some, saving others, and freeing people from bondage. It starts with her being a victim and ends with GOD getting the victory. By putting "you" in the story, it allows you (the reader) to feel the words coming off the page. While the physical, mental, and emotional abuse may at times appear to be a little hard to stomach, it is nevertheless a true testimony.

A Mile in My Shoes-Shelton Lamont Elkins 2009-04-01 Imagine an America where blacks are the oppressors, and whites endured the brutal ship passage to become slaves. A Mile In My Shoes stands exactly on this very premise. In short, it tells the same ol' song and dance of oppression which is not about one's color. It is about whoever is on top, wanting to maintain this position while someone else has to be the nigga. Human nature is the operative factor; color is only an easy designator of difference. In this tale, whether one labels the religious rites circumcision, castration or mutilation, the truth is that the act is a horrific travesty, a mutilation of God's gift. Regarding race, we have come a long way, but we have yet to be in each other's shoes. We cannot go back in time. The only way to achieve true empathy is through strong visualization which can allow us to experience the other's lessons of the soul. A Mile In My Shoes is written at gut level, but with high ideals. Tremaine, the main character, is a young white male who, having witnessed tragedies no child should, grows to manhood by twisting the twisted roots given to him in his own way. The whole country comes to know the gang he initiated at the age of fourteen. Since its inception Nails has been his life, but at thirty-six years old, can an old soldier cross the tracks, join with a black woman, and start a new life? This is but one of the challenges facing Trim, but no matter the number of problems, the love of God remains the one constant in his life; God declares that His investment of spirit shall not come back void. But can the movement of spirit release him from the bondage of circumstance that he might find true love to surpass all else; that love which begins with love of God and self?

Walk a Mile in My Shoes-Danette Jaeb 2013-11-13
Can you imagine going to kindergarten for the first time at the age of 13, living in a shack with eight other children and sleeping on a small foam mattress on a dirt floor? Or selling your clothes and searching the streets for returnable bottles so you can feed your children? Or being abandoned by everyone in your family when you are a toddler because they think you have a disease they don't understand and that they fear? Or having twelve children because you were an only daughter and your mother wanted lots of grandchildren to work endless hours on the farm? These are the realities of some women and children who live in poverty in the former township of Katutura, a suburb of the capital city of Windhoek, in Namibia. This book shares not only their stories and the stories of others, but it shows how one small organization, Family of Hope Services, is able to uplift these children and women and to give them a future. Walk a Mile in My Shoes is a fund-raising book with 100% of all proceeds from sales going to educate, feed, and to empower orphans and vulnerable children in Katutura. By buying this book you will empower a child and contribute to his or her future and hope. Reading this book will be your blessing; a realization of the good fortune in your own life."e;When I first met Abigail Bachopi and her team, and began to learn about Family of Hope Services, I found myself deeply moved by the vision and wisdom with which they run their Centre. They see clearly what is required to foster dignity, self-confidence, and not just an impression of hope but the real possibility that all of the children and youth who come through their doors will experience a more fulfilling life. I have witnessed the life-changing results of their programming over the past few years. Everything they undertake is done with the utmost integrity and honesty. They inspired me to share some of their stories so that others could see the challenges they face and to see the good work that they do. It is truly humbling to be in the company of these generous people with such big hearts, and incredible insight."e; Danette Jaeb, Author

Subjectivity across Media-Maike Sarah Reinert 2016-10-04 Media in general and narrative media in particular have the potential to represent not only a variety of both possible and actual worlds but also the perception and consciousness of characters in these worlds. Hence, media can be understood as "qualia machines," as technologies that allow for the production of subjective experiences within the affordances and limitations posed by the conventions of their specific mediality. This edited collection examines the transmedial as well as the medium-specific strategies employed by the verbal representations characteristic for literary texts, the verbal-pictorial representations characteristic for comics, the audiovisual representations characteristic for films, and the interactive representations characteristic for video games. Combining theoretical perspectives from analytic philosophy, cognitive theory, and narratology with approaches from phenomenology, psychosemiotics, and social semiotics, the contributions collected in this volume provide a state-of-the-art map of current research on a wide variety of ways in which subjectivity can be represented across conventionally distinct media.

Walking a Mile in Someone Else's Shoes-Rebekah J. Colson 2018-09-09 Walking a Mile in Someone Else's Shoes: Stories of Vocational Grieving, Transition and Recovery is a contemporary, anecdotal examination of the process of setting aside one vocational identity, and taking on another. It centers on the grieving and loss experienced when people lose jobs that they love, or the relief that they feel when leaving jobs that are burdensome. Included in these interviews are 48 people of different racial, class, gender, employment and educational backgrounds. It is important for the reader to hear the different struggles (and triumphs) of people who are like oneself, but also dissimilar, in order to help illustrate how money, gender, culture, and family structure factor into coping in the midst of vocational grieving. The interview subjects are working-class employees, white collar professionals, small business owners, military veterans, university professors and stay at home parents. Theoretical models and psychological theories are presented, including Elizabeth Kubler-Ross's "The Five Stages of Grief" and John M. Fisher's "Personal Transition Curve." Also examined are theories developed by B.F. Skinner, a famous American psychologist, behaviorist and inventor who was a Professor of Psychology at Harvard. Skinner's theories of behavior, including his theory of operant conditioning, have strongly influenced the fields of psychology, psychiatry, and counseling. Also included are aspects contained within "Psychology Applied to Modern Life" (Weiten et al) regarding four major types of coping skills: appraisal-focused, problem-focused, emotion-focused and meaning-focused. The most compelling aspect of Walking a Mile is the anecdotal evidence presented through the subjects' eyes. This concept of job transitions and grieving employment identity (friends, peers, projects, comfort level, etc.) is something that everyone experiences in his or her lifetime. Whether the change occurs willingly or outside of personal control, within or without the same company, a person's coping skills (their "tool belt"), their background, their support system and their personality all come into play when examining whether a transition becomes a negative or positive experience. Sometimes the most jarring transitions are those that were chosen by a person, but feel awkward and even involve regret at first glance.

Questions God Asks Us-Trevor Hudson 2020-03-01 Transformation comes from questions, not answers. We often look to the Bible as the book of answers. How often, though, do we consider the challenging questions God asks? Hudson notes that Jesus was asked 183 questions in the Gospels but directly only answered three. The Creator is teaching us as we teach children when they struggle with schoolwork: You learn more by doing than being fed an absolute answer. In Questions God Asks Us, we're encouraged to focus on the quest rather than a resolution. Such an approach leads to deeper dialogue and intimacy with the divine. This is a critical turning point in our journey with God—as it was for the author. "I thought the Bible existed to give me solutions to my everyday concerns and dilemmas," writes Hudson. "Then I realized I might be approaching God and the Bible from the wrong direction. It was as if God said to me, 'Trevor, rather than you always asking questions of me, start listening to the questions I have for you.'" Each of 10 questions Hudson excerpts from the Old and New Testaments serves as a starting point for genuine conversation with the Creator. He assures, "We're not starting the conversation with God from scratch. God has already begun it. We just need to plug into the conversation that is already going on." Questions God Asks Us offers a fresh approach for personal devotions and a unique discussion tool for small-group Bible studies. It's sure to bless anyone longing for a meaningful, growing relationship with God.

Early '70s Radio-Kim Simpson 2011-07-21 Early '70s Radio focuses on the emergence of commercial music radio "formats," which refer to distinct musical genres aimed toward specific audiences. This formatting revolution took place in a period rife with heated politics, identity anxiety, large-scale disappointments and seemingly insoluble social problems. As industry professionals worked overtime to understand audiences and to generate formats, they also laid the groundwork for market segmentation. Audiences, meanwhile, approached these formats as safe havens wherein they could re-imagine and redefine key issues of identity. A fresh and accessible exercise in audience interpretation, Early '70s Radio is organized according to the era's five prominent formats and analyzes each of these in relation to their targeted demographics, including Top 40, "soft rock", album-oriented rock, soul and country. The book closes by making a case for the significance of early '70s formatting in light of commercial radio today.
