Arab Dissident Movements, 1905-1955:
1921-1932-Anita L. P. Burdett 1996 The coverage in the 4 volumes includes the major categories of Arab nationalists and pan-Arabists with aspirations to arab unity, as well as activists with specific territorial demands and other anti-régime dissidents - who sometimes became the rulers.

Many great names are found in the pages, both famous and infamous. The greatest name in the struggle for Arab independence and unity, the remarkable idealist and man of action, the Emir Chekib Arslan, recurs throughout the collection for some 30 years. The records show the origins and development of notable political groups, including the Arab Ba'ath Party in 1949, and include intelligence reports on many subversive organisations, including a report as early as 1936 on the objectives and organisation of the Moslem Brotherhood; vain attempts at the suppression of this group continued in the reports from the 1940s and 1950s.--From publisher's description.

Indo-European Linguistics-Michael Meier-Brügger 2003-01-01 This Textbook on Indo-European Linguistics is designed as an introduction to the field. It presents current topics and questions in Indo-European linguistics in a clear and informative manner. This is the English translation of the eight edition of the work first published by Hans Krahe and it takes account of more recent research. While Krahe only considered phonology and morphology, the edition also includes a comprehensive account of syntax and lexis. Manfred Mayrhofer assisted with the section of phonology; Matthias Fritz wrote the section on syntax and provided support for the project as a whole.

A Dictionary of Selected Synonyms in the Principal Indo-European Languages-Carl Darling Buck 2008-07-03 Originally published in 1949 and appearing now for the first time in a paperbound edition, Buck's Dictionary remains an indispensable tool for diachronic analysis of the Indo-European languages. Arranged according to the meaning of words, the work contains more than 1,000 groupings of synonyms from the principal Indo-European languages. Buck first tabulates the words describing a particular concept and then discusses their etymological and semantic history, tracing changes in meaning of the root words as well as presenting cases indicating which of the older forms have been replaced by expressions of colloquial or foreign origin.

Toward Proto-Nostratic-Allan R. Bomhard 1984

This book represents the culmination of the author's work to date □ it incorporates and updates previous articles and adds much new material. This book is not □ nor was it ever intended to be □ a comparative grammar of either the Indo-European or the Afroasiatic language families. It is, rather, a comparison of Proto-Indo-European with Proto-Afroasiatic. While this is not the first attempt to demonstrate that Proto-Indo-European and Proto-Afroasiatic are genetically related, it is the first to use the radical revision of the Proto-Indo-European consonantal system proposed by Thomas V. Gamkrelidze, Paul J. Hopper, and Vjaceslav V. Ivanov. Moreover, unlike previous endeavors, this is the first to make extensive use of data from the non-Semitic branches of Afroasiatic. The assumptions underlying this investigation of the possibility of the common genetic origin of Proto-Indo-European and Proto-Afroasiatic differ considerably from the assumptions made in other works on "Nostratic"; the methodological approach followed in this monograph has been one of rigorous adherence to the time-honored principles of comparative reconstruction. The Laws of Indo-European-N.E. Collinge 1985-01-01 This book collects all the named laws of Indo-European, presents each in its original form and rationale and then provides an evaluation of all major attacks, revisions and exploitations, along with a full bibliography and index. Complete - thorough - exhaustive.

An Introduction to the Study of Classical Armenian-Robert Godel 1975 The author is particularly interested in comparative and historical research on Armenian as an Indo-European language. This "Introduction" consists of two parts. The first one describes the phonological and morphological system of Classical Armenian with the purpose of setting off its characteristic features, not of dwelling on such details as can be found in any good grammar book. The second part is comparative and historical. besides the best ascertained facts, it includes discussions on controversial issues, as well as some new insights in historical morphology.
